

Art + Ownership

with Brianna
Wettlaufer of + local art orgs

Who benefits from what we create? What kinds of economies can keep artists from starving while enabling their work to spread freely in the commons?

This gathering will bring together innovators and investigators working at the ecotone where art and ownership models meet. Brianna Wettlaufer, founder of the cooperative stock-photo platform Stocks United, will show how her company has put photographers back in charge. We'll also hear from local arts organizations with a legacy to build on, as well as up-and-coming projects that need our ideas and support to continue carving out pioneering new models. Come to learn and to contribute.

September 16, 2016

Impact Hub Boulder

1877 Broadway, Suite 100

6:30 pm $10***

*suggested investment — ½ off for CU students & Impact Hub Boulder members

Sponsored by CU's Department of Media Studies and the College of Media, Communication and Information, in partnership with Impact Hub Boulder

